I got this so far: if(this.parent!= null) this.parent.doSomething(); This is in an event handler. The reason I ask is that I can't set the parent as null. A: Use it in the constructor or some class property. class Foo { Foo(Foo parent) { if (parent == null) { // Do something } } } A: This is a very bad idea, but let's assume you can't set the parent to null. public class Foo { public Foo(Foo parent) { if (parent!= null) { // do something } } } Or you can use an object initializer, as in @Bogdan's answer. public class Foo { public Foo(Foo parent) { if (parent!= null) { // do something } } } Either way, the caller can always access this.parent from within this method, even if this.parent == null. If you didn't need to know whether or not the parent was non-null, you wouldn't be using this pattern. public void Foo(Foo parent) { if (parent == null) { throw new ArgumentException("parent must not be null"); } // do something } A: 2d92ce491b
