In short, it increases the efficiency of your mouse clicks, by automating text copying: In order to put QwikCopy into action, simply highlight a keyword or phrase by pressing CTRL+SHIFT+C. With the internal search box displayed (highlighted in red), just type a search query. The results are displayed in an internal search result list (highlighted in blue), and by pressing enter, the search results are copied to the clipboard. You can then paste them into your document, your email, web or anywhere else. QwikCopy is a very simple add-on, it doesn't include any unnecessary functionality. It is designed specifically to aid web-surfers, wiki-visitors and email writers. QwikCopy should only be considered as a preview, it is not a replacement for a web search. QwikCopy allows you to enter wikis with ease. How? When you highlight a keyword, QwikCopy's search-box automatically appears. You can then type a search query (searching for all websites) or copy one of the search results (you can also copy directly to the clipboard). QwikCopy is an add-on for Mozilla Firefox. If you are a Chrome user, Chrome already includes some similar features. QwikCopy allow you Add keyboard shortcuts for quick web searches and copying of text. A: I've tried this one before, the process is simple, just add the following user script in your browser: No additional requirements, if you don't already use a keyboard shortcut with your browser, this script will allow you to bind a shortcut with your browser, the keyboard shortcut is set to Ctrl+C (Copy) by default.

A: The script is available here: It can be added to the browser's user-scripts directory as a text file called quikcopy.user.js (works on Firefox and Chrome). Anti-Allergic Activity of Clove. Clove (Syzygium aromaticum) is a rich source of many bioactive compounds, such as eugenol, caffeic acid phenethyl ester, and vitamin C. Clove extract has a recognized anti-inflammatory effect and a protective effect on atopic dermatitis. In a previous study, we reported that clove extract exhibits an inhibitory effect on mast cell-mediated anaphylactic reactions in the rat. In the present study, we evaluated the anti-allergic activity of clove extract using the anti-IgE-induced allergic reaction, passive cutaneous anaphylaxis, and formalin-induced nociception models in mice. The results showed that clove extract inhibited the ovalbumin-induced passive cutaneous anaphylaxis reaction as well as rat peritoneal mast cell degranulation. In addition, clove extract dose-dependently inhibited the concentration of β -hexosaminidase in the RBL-2H3 cell line (RBL cells are rat basophilic leukemia cells) and rat peritoneal mast cells, which were stimulated with anti-dinitrophenol immunoglobulin E. Furthermore, clove extract inhibited the capsaicin-induced nociceptive response in mice and dose-dependently suppressed histamine-induced vascular permeability. These results suggest that clove extract inhibits allergic reactions through the reduction of mast cell activation and the inhibition of cutaneous mast cell and vascular permeability.
