Discussion of how one can incorporate into streamflow models the changes that have occurred since the last model due to the implementation of a management tool. II. Discussion of how to adapt an existing model in order to study the long term (i.e. several years or decades) behavior of a stream including the impacts of water management tools. Objectives: I. Undertake discussions to address key questions that relate to the ability of streamflow models to incorporate observed changes in flow and the implications of these changes for assessing stream flow variability and baseline stream flow. Discussion Summary: This workshop will address the following key questions: 1. Which existing or new simulation models are available that include the addition of ecologically and hydrologically relevant management tools, and what new or existing models might these tools be incorporated in? 2. What are the benefits and constraints associated with incorporating such management tools into a model? 3. Given the challenge in incorporating such management tools into models, what implications do those implications for the assessment of stream flow variability and baseline stream flow have? 4. What are ways to incorporate such tools into models at a particular site? 3e33713323
