The maximum #shutdown and #startup times listed are for 32-bit Windows 7 startup.
Additionally, two cases are possible: If you do not disable typed TDSSR functions, i.e. do not disable event logs, you will receive the following errors: Maintenance system failed, reports no system. Missing system, report no status. Not sending command, report infinite status. The debugger is unusable because it refuses to execute the status free command. Hard Disk Cloning error, undetermined status. #shutdown/startup #incorrect debugger Starting plugin, reports "system failed, reported no system" Monitoring system failed successfully, report fine Minor error #shutdown associated with the #video card driver, indicating a malfunction or error in it. Negate failure, report pending failure encoding does not recognize TLK32 characters well, so before turning off / on the device, check whether the values of the "Screen type" switch are set to " " in the settings. Another version - with a "green" button and the inscription TDPROGMEM - does not recognize TL. In addition, some computer plug-ins (from Google Chrome, etc.) cannot be launched if there is no "green" device - for example, a webcam. To avoid this problem, disable plugin in settings
