And, no matter how much you believe in your posting and it's worth, you cannot say that about every single person who reads it. Thing is, when you write, you don't have control over who reads what and you don't have the ability to say, "Hey, it's only for a particular audience". Your friends and family will see your post, and this matters. It gives them an opportunity to re-think what you wrote, and they have a chance to say, "Hey, that was really good!" But, you know your friends and family don't like to be negative. This is why you can't do something so publicly. You can type, "Thank you friend" on Facebook or thank your mom on Twitter, but you cannot do that to your friends. This has always been the social media challenge, and there is no perfect way to do it. But, you could make a little more headway by grouping your friends into categories, rather than just having it "open". Consider it this way: No matter how much you love your friends and family, you cannot marry them or have any children with them. You can actually count the number of friends you have, and you can count the number of friends you are related to. But, you cannot know the number of friends you have, relative to your "real

Many of you are pretty passionate about your blog, aren't you? Man, I do feel you. But did you also know that you have many ways to make your job easier and to enhance your blogs functionality? Gone are the days when your blog was something that only you read and see. Now, everyone can see it on the web. And the most important thing is that you can interact with others via comments, feedback and shares. If you are looking for a way to make your blog better than it was before, there's the name of a tool for you - Qumana. It's an application that you can use to post, edit and manage your blog posts. That's a pretty broad description isn't it? Well, the fact is, Qumana does a lot more than that. You will need to sign up if you want to use this application, but the truth is, you don't need to do that. Qumana is absolutely free to use. It comes with a very intuitive graphical interface, so you don't need any advanced skill sets in order to use it. What makes it stand out in a crowd is the fact that it comes with a lot of tools and features that you can use to enhance your blog. Another important thing that you will need to do when installing this application is to register the blog you want to use. You need to provide your blog URL, so that the application will have the API call, and also provide the username and password, which you are using for your blog. That means you won't be able to use the application if you aren't connected to the internet. If you set the application up, it will provide a default timezone for your new posts. It also provides you with the number of posts for synchronization. If you are using Qumana to simply write your blog posts, there's no need to do anything else. All you need to do is to write the post, click on the Publish button and that's it. But if you want to enable the interaction features on your blog, you will need to do a lot more than that. Qumana lets you interact with users via comments and feedback on your blog and that will surely make it a better place. The thing is, you will need to create a post to share it with others, so there's that too. The application provides you with a few options and you can pick how many of them you want to use. The best
