Jamaicans have been riding horses from as far back as the beginning of the nation's history. The Caribbean has always been a good horseback riding place. Equitation was an integral part of fitness and exercise for all. Hundreds of thousands of riders of all ages participated in horse riding in Jamaica. Jamaica has a reputation for being the best place in the world for riders of all ages. Over the years Jamaica has experienced many different forms of equitation. Horse riding has experienced a myriad of different forms across the Caribbean including bareback riding, hunters, jumps, dressage, dressage horses, racing horse, jumping horses, saddles and bridles and various disciplines of horse riding. Over the years different horse rides have been found in Jamaica. Before the British colonisation, the Jamaican people used horses to get from one plantation to the next and to carry goods on their backs. Using horses to cart goods was common in Jamaica for centuries before the British controlled the island. Jamaicans were very good horse riders during slavery times. After emancipation the people of Jamaica found other past times to do instead of riding horses. However, the riding horse industry grew and had a major impact on Jamaica's economy and culture. Jamaica has always taken pride in the equitation industry in the region. Even in the 1980s horse riding was one of the largest revenue producers in Jamaica. Horse riding in Jamaica can trace its beginnings back to the 17th century. There were several horse riding clubs that ran horse rides. There were horse races on several occasions over the years. Equitation has had its fair share of ups and downs over the years. Due to the increase in horse traffic, injuries increased and safety was compromised. There was a time when horse racing was one of the largest industries in Jamaica and it had the highest rate of accidents. Over the years there was also some corruption that came with horse racing. A Jamaican horse could go from $40,000 to $100,000. It was also during this time that Jamaican Native Boars were introduced as a means of the livelihood of the horse riding b7e8fdf5c8
